About this booklet

Jean Hailes for Women's Health acknowledges the Traditional Owners of Country throughout Australia and recognises their continued connection to land, waters and culture. We pay respect to Elders past, present and emerging.

This booklet has been developed in consultation with Miwatj Health Aboriginal Corporation (NT), Link-Up (NSW) Aboriginal Corporation, Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander staff from Women's Health and Family Services (WA), and Aboriginal Health Council of Western Australia.

We would like to acknowledge the women of Ramingining, Galiwin'ku and Yirrkala communities (NT), and women from the Yorgas Own Time group in Belmont (WA) who participated in consultations to help shape this resource.

Jean Hailes for Women's Health gratefully acknowledges the support of the Australian Government.

715 health check

It's a health check for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people of all ages.

It's when a health carer checks your overall health to help you stay strong and healthy.

It's free to have a 715 health check every year at your local clinic.

715 health check

Have your 715 health check to:

- see if you're healthy and well
- find out about health problems early, before they get worse, and get treatment
- learn how to take care of your health to prevent illness in the future.

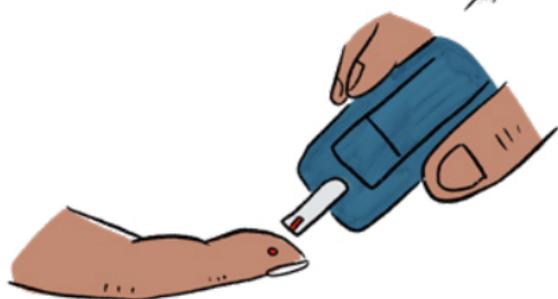

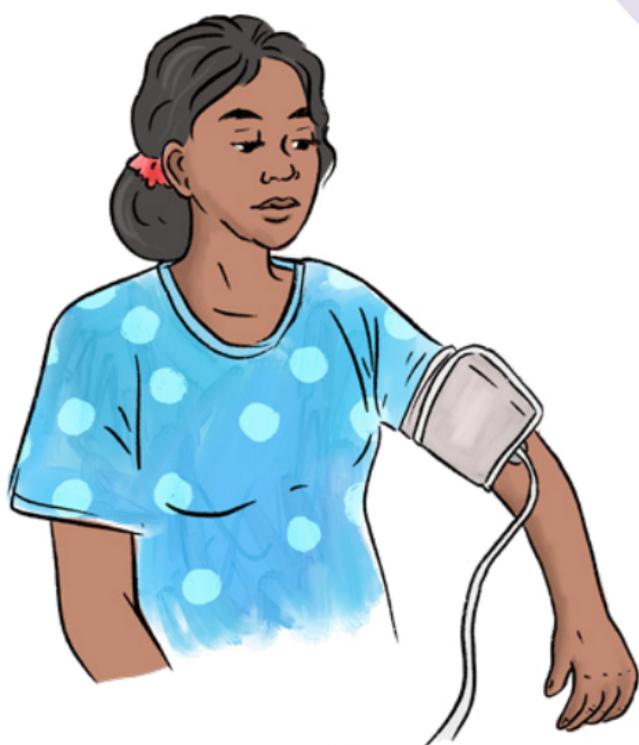

715 health check

At the 715 health check, the health carer may:

- do some tests using special medical equipment
- ask you about your lifestyle
- ask you about any illnesses you have or had in the past
- ask you how you feel and if you have any pain or unusual changes in your body.

Talk to the health carer about anything that worries you about your health.

Cancer screening tests

There are important cancer screening tests you should have regularly. They help find cancer early, even before you feel sick.

Finding cancer early gives you a much better chance to get well again and enjoy your life and family.

Cervical cancer

It's cancer that grows in the cervix, which is the entrance to the womb.

A common virus called HPV is usually the cause of cervical cancer.

Cervical screening test

It's a test that checks if you have HPV.

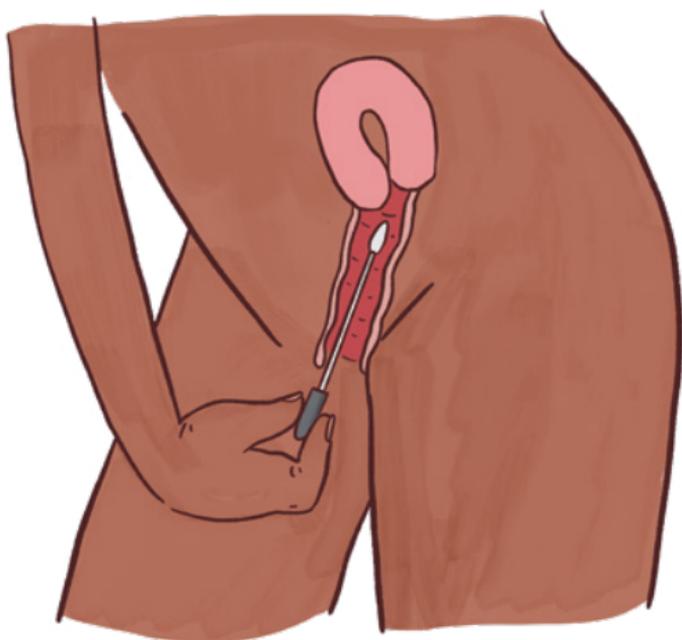

You can do the test yourself, or the health carer can do it for you.

The sample is then sent for testing.

This test is your best protection against cervical cancer.

Cervical screening test

Have a cervical screening test every 5 years from age 25 to 74.

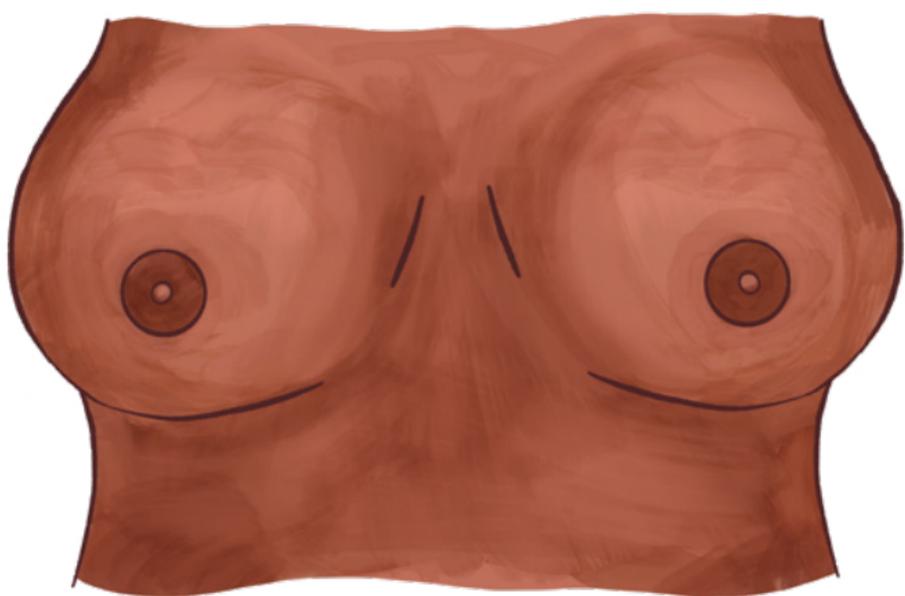

But if you're bleeding or have unusual discharge or pain, you need to see a health carer right away. Don't wait until your next cervical screening test.

Breast cancer

It's cancer that grows in the breast. It's the most common cancer among women in Australia.

It's much easier to treat if found early.

Breast self-check

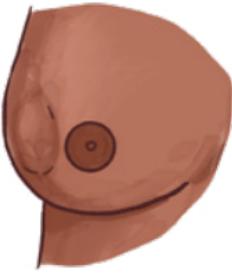

To find breast cancer early, get to know your breasts and check them for any unusual changes regularly.

Check for any lumps, pain, discharge, or changes in the size or shape of your breasts.

If you notice anything unusual, have it checked by a health carer as soon as possible.

Lumps

Changes in size or shape

Redness, pain or nipple discharge

Changes to skin or nipple

Breast screen

A breast screen is a photo of the inside of your breasts. It shows changes that are too small to feel or see.

Have a breast screen every 2 years from age 50 to 74.

Call BreastScreen Australia on 13 20 50 to book a breast screen near you.

Ask your health carer if you need a breast screen before you turn 50.

Bowel cancer

It's cancer that grows in the bowel.

It often develops without any symptoms, so you may not know you have it.

Bowel cancer screening test

It's a test that checks for blood in your poo, which can be an early sign of bowel cancer.

Do this test every 2 years from age 45 to 74.

It's the best way to find bowel cancer early.

Bowel cancer screening test

The test can be sent to your home or you can get the test at your local clinic.

The test is free and easy for you to do at home. It comes with instructions, but you can ask a health carer to tell you how to do the test.

Sexual health check

It's a visit to your health carer to discuss things like:

- safe sex
- contraception
- fertility issues
- your rights in a relationship.

You can also get tested for sexually transmitted infections (STIs).

If you feel shame about having a sexual health check, remember that health carers are there to help and they won't judge you.

STIs – sexually transmitted infections

STIs are infections you can get during vaginal, oral or anal sex or while sharing needles or other things with someone's blood on them.

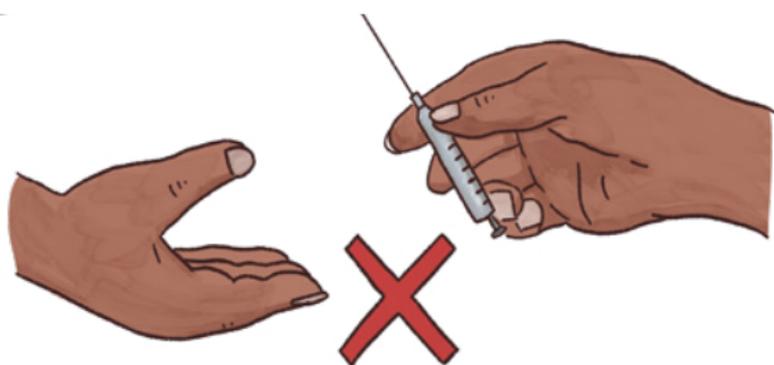

If left untreated, STIs can cause serious health problems.

STIs – sexually transmitted infections

To protect yourself against STIs:

- get tested for STIs and ask your partner to get tested too – these tests are free and easy to do
- use condoms during sex
- don't share needles or other things with blood on them.

Remember

To stay healthy and strong,
have a:

- 715 health check every year
- cervical screening test every 5 years from age 25 to 74
- regular breast self-check
- breast screen every 2 years from age 50 to 74
- bowel cancer screening test every 2 years from age 45 to 74
- STI test if you're having sex. Ask your health carer how often you need to get tested.

About the artwork

The artwork and illustrations are by Coolamon Creative – a 100% Aboriginal owned and operated creative services agency based in Alice Springs.

“This contemporary design shows the families, healthy people, and healthy women. The varied land elements (waterholes, stars and hills) represent the many different regions across Australia that everyone is from, each with different backgrounds and journeys. Our health is vital and should remain at the centre in everything we do as individuals and as a community.”

– Samantha Campbell, Graphic Designer & Illustrator, Coolamon Creative.
